

Seventh Grade
Expository Practice Prompt Three:

A rainy day doesn't have to be bad.
Some people like rainy days. Explain how to turn a rainy day into a good day.

Pre-Writing Suggestion: Have students read the prompt carefully over two or three times, then have them explain to a partner what specific type of details a scorer would be expecting from in a sample that addresses all parts of the topic.

Then discuss what organization skills a writer would want to remember as they prepared to write a response to the prompt above.
