

Three elementary students who attended the Northern Nevada Writing Project's annual Piñon Poetry Festival share their So Much Depend Upon poems.

You Will Never Know

by Kamryn, 2nd grade writer

So much depends upon chocolate fudge hunks of cake with ice cream with thick yummy frosting also with a bunch of M & Ms on top with yellow and green gumballs too with cherry red and orangey orange

Sugar Daddies and Sugar Babies with candy balloons too I'm sorry it's so deliciously yummy
You will never know.

That I am Alive

by Stephen, third grade poet

So much depends upon a kiss upon my cheek to take a safe breath each day to wake up in the morning and remember to be thankful
that I am alive
and may God hold us in his hand.

Life on this Planet

by Blake, third grade poet

So much depends upon
The steaming hot sun
The earth's crust breaking
Life on this planet
Without these three gleaming stars
In the sky
We would be nothing Nothing at all
Just ash floating upon space Waiting for a new planet
I know this because it is coming From this day forward consider this Watch your back
