

photo taken by teacher, Christina Rhodes

The Girl in the Pink Dress

a poem by Vanessa, tenth grade

One day, a girl in a beautiful pink dress caught my eye
It was not her beautiful brown hair,
Her gently pink-tickled skin Nor her shiny, pure white shoes that made me stare for so long.
It wasn't the graceful, slow strides she took Nor the angelic tune she hummed.

It was her eyes

Her glittery, radiant eyes that told me a story of innocence that I had never been told before.

What do you like about Vanessa's writing style? Which writing trait(s) does she excel with?

What story or poem might you write inspired by this photograph?