

(This page makes a great poster to hang in your classroom)

Eight Great Questions that Encourage Unique Writing Approaches

- 1. What might happen if you reversed your story or the sequence of your report? Could it start at the end? Right in the middle?
- 2. What might happen if you told the story or report from someone else's perspective? Could it be someone VERY minor who tells the story? Even a fly on the wall?
- 3. What if you started the story right in the middle of the best part, or you began your report with the most unusual fact you could find?
- 4. What if you changed your story or report into an unexpected genre of writing: a recipe, a lost and found or want ad, a letter to the editor, a series of multiple choice test questions, a top 10 list, a fable, a children's story, a play, etc.
- 5. What unique comparison (simile or metaphor) might you use to base the entire story or report on?
- 6. What would happen if you used a sensory detail for all five senses at five strategic places in your story or report?
- 7. What kind of riddle might you hide in your paper for an observant reader to discover? An acrostic sentence? A sausage sentence?
- 8. What letter, word, or part of speech might you try to NEVER use (not even once) in your rough draft?

*See page 112 and page 113 of the NNWP's Trait guide for explanations of these!

©2006 Northern Nevada Writing Project. All rights reserved.

This resource comes from the best website for writers and writing teachers: <http://writingfix.com> and <http://writingfix.org>
Use of this document in the classroom is encouraged and supported. Others must request permission from the website to reproduce.

This handout is featured in the NNWP's "Going Deep with 6 Trait Language" print guide. Visit <http://nnwp.org> for information on ordering the complete guide.